Band Bios

Tom Powers is the lead singer and rhythm guitarist for Mumblefish. Tom has been writing, playing, performing, and recording music since junior high school, and has played in several bands. In 2000, he broke out on his own as a solo/acoustic act, playing pubs and coffee houses in and around Boston. Now, he's back and ready to rock with Mumblefish.

Steve Foley is the bass player for Mumblefish. Steve grew up listening to jazz and classical, and started playing guitar in high school but switched to bass in college. He toured New England in the 70s as the fire-breathing bass player for the Metal band, "Seth." In the early 80s, Steve wrote and recorded a number of original rock tracks at Sound Design Studios. His main influences are Cream, The Who, Led Zeppelin, Van Halen, ZZ Top, Jimi Hendrix, and a whole lot of other great musicians.

Danny Clark is the lead guitarist for Mumblefish. Danny has been playing in bands since he was 11 and started out as a drummer. He switched to guitar because of Cream-era Clapton and suffered through the disco era by playing hard rock and fusion and rediscovered slide guitar and the blues in the eighties. His main influences are Clapton, Hendrix, SRV, Allman, Zappa, McLaughlin and everybody else.

Richard Buck is the drummer for Mumblefish. Richard is a Cape Cod native and studied with Richard Koff at the CC Conservatory, and is well-versed in a variety of musical styles. Over the years, Richard spent time touring with SBP out of St. Louis and has played on a number of recordings, most recently as the house sessions drummer at MDI studios in Plymouth, Mass. His influences include Tony Williams, Vinnie Colaiuta, Peter Erskine, Steve Gadd, Stewart Copeland, John Bonham, Beethoven, Jeff Beck, and a host of other great musicians.
